International Women's Day 2010 Project

Over the past two and a half decades, the number of Indonesians working outside the country has continued to rise, with a now estimated two million illegally working overseas. The largest number of women migrant workers are at the lower end of the job hierarchy in domestic work and prostitution where they suffer gross human rights violations. They frequently have to deal with difficult living and working conditions, increased health risks, a lack of access to social services and various forms of abuse. All the proceeds from International Women's Day will be directed towards UNIFEM's Project to Empower Women Migrant Workers in Indonesia which seeks to empower women migrant workers from a gender and rights based development perspective by addressing their concerns and ensuring their rights are recognised and respected. For more information please visit www.internationalwomensday.org.au
